

From: Gayoso, Jose
To: Arrington, Linda
Cc: Motilall, Christina; Rogala, Jessica
Subject: Spanish labeling, purpose of having stamped label
Date: Monday, July 20, 2015 6:47:49 PM

Hi Linda,

I wanted to ask you about a question that came up last week. I'm on the CA specialty crops tour this week (and so is Jai, incidentally), so I'll just ask you by email.

We were talking with RD about the pilot last week and a question came up: what do we gain by stamping bilingual pilot labels? Could we achieve the same goal by putting out the translation guide and leaving the bilingual labeling process as non-notification?

The benefit would be that RD wouldn't have to review the pilot labels. But I think a drawback would be that we wouldn't really know what products have participated in the pilot, unless the companies just told us.

Can you think of other benefits of having the pilot labels stamped? In other words, is it worth it to add a new process for RD?

Thanks,
Jose